Three Sides of Argument Are Presented to Judiciary Committee of House.

REPRESENTATIVE WHALEY DEFENDS SOUTH CAROLINA

Challenges Assertions That State Has No Laws to Protect Women in Factories.

Three sides of the suffrage argumen were heard by the judiciary committee of the House today when the two faccommon ground to combat the arguforward by the National Association Opposed to Suffrage. Much to the ap parent dislike of the Congressiona Union, the judiciary committee decided vesterday that the members of both suffrage factions must be heard to-

The National American Woman Suffrage Association was heard first, one of its members. Mrs. Pattie Ruffner Jacobs of Alabama, drawing fire from Representative Whaley of South Carolina, when she said his state had no laws to protect working women, no legislative chivairy at all, and that there is nothing there in the way of a wage law or an eight-hour law for working girls. Representative Whaley replied very sharply that he did not believe it. Mrs. Jacobs was endeavoring to prove her case, when a Mrs. Todd, former state factory inspector of Illinois, arose from the audience and declared that South Carolina has no laws to protect women in factories. The National American Woman Sufstill do not believe it," continued

Says Work Alone Will Win.

The battle for suffrage can never be won by either pink teas or red fire nothing but persistent, untiring hard work and consecration to the cause will bring victory. This was the state-ment of Dr. Shaw in that part of her presidential address, submitted yesterday afternoon, which dealt with the outlook for the future.

outlook for the future.

"We do not bring a new message," she said, in part. "Ours is an old one, but brought anew and stripped of ignorance and prejudice. We do not protest against the ideals of the founders of the government, but against their false interpretation and their application to a chosen group instead of to the whole people.

"Our motto should never be 'My country, right or wrong," but rather, 'My country, may she be right, and if wrong, may I do my best to set her right.

For "Department of the Home." Dr. Shaw recommended a federal "Department of the Home," to take precedence over all other departments and whose head should be a cabinet member of corresponding rank. She delivered a review of the progress of the suffrage cause during the twelve years of her presidency. "Our opponents may ask us why,

"Our opponents may ask us why, when detailing our triumphs, we do not mention our losses." she concluded. "The answer is because we have none. We have not lost an inch anywhere. Ours is a winning fight."

Later the by-laws of the association were amended and Dr. Shaw was elected an honorary vice president for life. Another feature of yesterday afternoon's gathering was the submission of the tentative budget for 1915-1916 by Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, the treasurer. Its total is $50,000, or several times any yearly amount ever spent by the association heretofore.

A conference on federal work, the only event on last night's convention program, was enlivened by a proposal by Miss Zona Gale of Portage. Wis, that the convention join with the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage and form "an efficiency committee" of five members from each organization to work for the passage of the Susan B, Anthony federal suffrage amendment in the present Congress. Mrs. Antoinette Funk of Chicago raised the point of order that the convention was not formally in session, and after a spirited discussion a motion by Mrs. Catt that the entire question go over to the business session of the convention was adopted.

Suffrage Leaders Urge Action by Congress on Constitutional Amendment

Representatives of the Congressional nion appeared before the Senate committee on woman suffrage today and urged speedy and favorable action on a resolution making it possible for an amendment to the Constitution to be adopted by the states providing nation-wide woman suffrage. They told the committee that the women of the western states, where suffrage already h

ern states, where suffrage already had been granted, were putting the cause of women above that of party, and that these women were being completely organized as fast as possible so as to bring pressure to bear upon senators and representatives in Congress for a constitutional amendment for nation-wide woman suffrage.

Two of the speakers were from states where women vote—Mrs. Frances Joliffe and Mrs. Sara Bard Field. Mrs. Joliffe told the committee that the women of California, from which state she came, had determined to place the cause of women above other issues, and that she herself had been a democrat and believed strongly in her party, but that she put aside all affiliations with it when it came to the question of nation-wide woman suffrage. She declared that the talk heard in the halls of Congress about states' rights and that every state should decide the suffrage question for itself was a mere excuse to dodge the issue.

Mrs. Joliffe declared that it was not true that the women of the squth, as a whole or in large majority, were opposed to woman suffrage. sed to woman suffrage.

"I made more than I thought I would and what I did make will go a long way," said the Santa Claus Girl today in announcing her success. "It doesn't cost much in these days to send a child some simple gift."

Letters continue to come from those youngsters who think Santa Claus lives at The Star office. They have always been a problem, but this year the Santa Claus Girl is taking them off the hands of The Star and adding them to her own list of those who want things. "Europe's Battle-Front Lessons for America"

NCE the beginning of the great war FRED-ERICK PALMER has been the only official representative of the entire American press with the allies-and England and France selected him for this important part because of his intimate knowledge of the science of war.

Beginning with the Greek war of 1897, Mr. Palmer has been at the front of every important war waged since then. He has reported and studied them all. As Col. Roosevelt says, Mr. Palmer has seen more of modern warfare than any American officer or soldier.

In the present war Mr. Palmer has enjoyed to the utmost the confidence of the British and French war chiefs, both at the front and in the war offices. So great is British confidence in Mr. Palmer that he was the first civilian allowed to visit the British grand fleet, "somewhere in the North sea," and to observe and study this great collection of floating fortresses that gives England her control of the seas.

Mr. Palmer is recognized the world over in military circles as one of the great living authorities on war, and what he has to say to his fellowcountrymen in this series of articles should command the most careful attention and consideration of every true American.
